

Wet and wild

Despite an afternoon shower that turned the lawn at Lakewood Amphitheatre into a slippery mess, there was joy in Mudville. Pearl Jam took the stage in Atlanta for the first time in more than four years. Though the show had been sold out for months, face-value tickets appeared to be plentiful outside the venue. Many concertgoers claimed to have gotten their tickets in the last couple of weeks.

The already enthralled audience was ecstatic when the quintet launched into the blistering "Evenflow" from its debut album "Ten." The happiest folks, though, were the ones with seats under the roof. "We got covered seats, thankfully," said Jeanette Leonard, 22, of Fayetteville. "The lawn's a mess. It's going to be a lot of stinky bodies out there." The crowd remained standing through most of the Seattle band's set.
